political thought be it islamic or western it can be defined as an exercise in thinking and conceptualization which is aimed at political institution and political power the differences between islamic and western political thought is that islamic political thought is a product of revelational guidance and reason exercised by muslim thinkers in the classical period although both islamic and western political thoughts rest on intellectual pedestals but they are not identical western political thought is a form of thinking based upon the greek conception of political philosophy from islamic political thought s view point the birth and development of political institutions is largely the product of human thought and action the creation of the madinah society or madinah state was the product of the prophet muhammad pbuh as result of his interaction with his followers in the city of madinah which led to the formation of madinah state which also called as the first islamic state in muslim history

if westerners know a single islamic term it is likely to be jihad the arabic word for holy war the image of islam as an inherently aggressive and xenophobic religion has long prevailed in the west and can at times appear to be substantiated by current events I carl brown challenges this conventional wisdom with a fascinating historical overview of the relationship between religious and political life in the muslim world ranging from islam s early centuries to the present day religion and state examines the commonplace notion held by both radical muslim ideologues and various western observers alike that in islam there is no separation between religion and politics by placing this assertion in a broad historical context the book reveals both the continuities between premodern and modern islamic political thought as well as the distinctive dimensions of modern muslim experiences brown shows that both the modern day fundamentalists and their critics have it wrong when they posit an eternally militant unchanging islam outside of history they are conflating theology and history they are confusing the oughtand the is he writes as the historical record shows mainstream muslim political thought in premodern times tended toward political quietism brown maintains that we can better understand present day politics among muslims by accepting the reality of their historical diversity while at the same time seeking to identify what may be distinctive in muslim thought and action in order to illuminate the distinguishing characteristics of islam in relation to politics brown compares this religion with its two semitic sisters judaism and christianity drawing striking comparisons between islam today and christianity during the reformation with a wealth of evidence he recreates a tradition of islamic diversity every bit as rich as that of judaism and christianity
